With respect to the laying pullet Lil sent to the lab by Tom Grumbine July 19, 1960, the lab reported a clean break in the keel bone with much congestion but no bruises such as would have resulted from a kick or a blow. Dr. Shillinger asked Tom if she could have flown down from a high object (not likely) and inflicted it. She was in prime physical condition but going out of production from injury. Careful examination revealed no disease.
